Archaeology Beyond the Academy

The University of Calgary Department of Archaeology and the Rise of Consulting Archaeology in Western Canada

Brian Vivian, Lifeways of Canada

The legacy of the U of C Archaeology Department is not complete without considering its' contributions toward Cultural Resource Management studies. This presentation discusses the role U of C Archaeology played in the rise of the CRM industry; the individuals involved, and the corporate entities that formed that were pivotal in shaping the industry over the last forty plus years in Alberta and beyond. This talk goes on to highlight the greater contributions consulting has made to archaeological studies across Western Canada.

Brian Vivian is a Part Owner and Senior Project Archaeologist at Lifeways of Canada, and has been employed in Consulting Archaeology in Alberta since 1981. Brian obtained degrees in Archaeology and Anthropology from Simon Fraser University and the University of Calgary, and also completed his PhD Candidacy at Binghamton University in New York. With near forty years of experience in the field, Brian has held permit for numerous surveys and excavations throughout Alberta, B.C., Saskatchewan, Montana, and Wyoming in addition to working on assorted research based projects in Ghana; the Canadian High Arctic; New Mexico, and in California between 1981 and 1987.
